An Archangel Stock Designed for the Howa 1500 Action

For those looking to build a budget precision rifle on their own terms, the Howa 1500 action is available in a wide variety of barrel lengths and chamberings. Brownells even offers an incredible number of barreled actions from Howa, which leaves consumers with the choice of a dedicated stock. The Archangel Stock from Pro Mag has been updated into a Precision Elite format, and it's the perfect pairing for a dedicated precision action. The Pro Mag Archangel Precision Elite Stock is constructed from a combination of high-strength carbon fiber paired with glass-reinforced polymer. The stock is outfitted with a near-vertical grip complete with palm swells, as well as a locking storage compartment. The forend is outfitted with M-LOK accessory points located at 3-, 6- and 9 o'clock, enabling owners to outfit their gun with the accessories needed for a solid shooting platform. The stock also features a click-adjustable cheek riser, as well as a hooked butt that allows users to place their support hand for added stabilization. Each Pro Mag Archangel Stock is designed to accept detachable magazines, and a single Type D Archangel polymer magazine is included with the gun. The magazine holds 7 rounds of any cartridge based on the .308 Win. Also included on the stock is a click-adjustable length-of-pull, and three flush-fit hard points allow users to mount detachable sling swivels. The stock features an all-black finish and weighs in at 3.7 pounds. In addition, the Howa 1500 Archangel Stock will also fit Smith & Wesson 1500 and Weatherby Vanguard short-action rifle receivers.
